

APRA and DCRCA present

The Science of Addiction and Recovery

Flo Hilliard

“Cunning, baffling and powerful” often describes addiction disease. Advancing science is making it less baffling and confirms traditional pathways to recovery. More importantly, understanding the science of addiction and recovery can help many more people find recovery pathways.

– Flo Hilliard, of the University of Wisconsin, will offer training on the SCIENCE OF ADDICTION AND RECOVERY, prepared with assistance of the National Institute of Drug Abuse (NIDA) and sponsorship of the Faces and Voices of Recovery. The DC Recovery Community Alliance is proud to bring this important training to Washington with the help and sponsorship of the Addiction Prevention and Recovery Administration (APRA).

People in recovery, counselors, therapists, and citizens dedicated to seeing more people in recovery will benefit from this powerful presentation.

The training is free, but you must register! To reserve your place:

Email Recovery@RecoveryWorks.org or call... 202-797-2388.

(No bulk reservations. Each registration requires a name.)

APRA Conference Room

1300 First Street, NE

(one block west of the New York Avenue Metro station)

7:30PM, Thursday, February 19th

The Addiction Prevention and Recovery Administration (DOH) is DC's lead government agency in funding, providing, and improving treatment, preventing addiction, and promoting recovery.

The DC Recovery Community Alliance is a non-profit organization of people committed to assuring that alcohol and other drug disorders are recognized early, treated promptly and effectively, and that recovery is sustained for life. You can join us in that work at wwwRecoveryWorks.org/DCRCA.htm